legislature, Gov. Worth makes an able argument against the adoption of the Radical amendments. The paragraphs are taken from If there be any feature in the American sys value, it is the fact that a municipal code is provided under the jurisdiction of each State, by which all controverles as to life, liberty, or property, except in the new limited field of Federal jurisdiction, are determined by a jury of the county or neighborhood where the parties reside and the counter afters better to become the protector of life, liberty, and property in the States, and the guarantee of equal protection of the laws; and by appropriate legislation to declare a system of rights and remedies, which can be administered out in the Federal courts, then the most common and funditar officers of justice must be transferred to the few points in the State where these courts are held, and to judges and other officers, defiving and holding their commissions, not from the anthority and people of the State as heretofore, and trespeases against the person, assentits and betteries, faise imprisonments and the like, where only our own extinents are parties, must be regulated by the Congress of the nation and adjudged only in its courts. I cannot believe that the deliberate judgment of the people of any State or the first proposition of each state. The states, as by so much, are to cease to be self-governing committees as heretofore, and trespeases against the person, assentits and betteries, faise imprisonments and the like, where only our own extinces are parties, must be regulated by the courts and street and the like, where only our own extinces are parties, must be regulated by the courts and the like where the courts are larged to a different from those on which along neith street are to be suddent and betteries, faise imprisonments and the like, where only our own extinces are parties, must be regulated by the court and the proposition of the failed and the like and the l prisonments and the like, where only our own estimons are parties, must be regulated by the Congress of the nation and adjudged only in its conris. It cannot believe that the deliberate interest of the people of any State or, any section will approve such an innovation, for although its annoyances may be ours to day they must expect them to be theirs to-morrow. The people of this State, with a singular approach to unanimity, are sincerely dearons of a restoration of their constitutional relations with the American Union. In the feo of circumstances rendering it nearly impossible, they have paid its government the tunes of former years, laid when another do face government whose powers they could not have resisted if they would, was making levies in money and kind almost greater than they could bear, they acquiesced in the axtinction of siavery, which annihilated more than half their wealth; they have borne with patience the exclusion of their senators and representatives irom the halis of Congress, where they have had no one to contradict or explain the most exagerated misrepresentations, or even to make known their grievances. How long this unnatural condition of our initiations is to coutine, it seems, we shall be allowed to have no share in determining. No time has been set, and no conditions prove to the countine, it read, we shall be allowed to have no share in determining. No time has been set, and no conditions prove that the course. Unbappily our present condition. At present it blends itself with our national at fairs. From the excilent pariod of our hastory under the national Union, it has been the cause or the pretext of sectional strife. Dismonists North and Sonth have constantly seed it to alienate one section of the country from the other. When these strifes eniminated in war, and sievery was auddenly about isbed, and the Sonth thereby grievously impoverished and constrained to accommodate, itself to a violent change, more anddenly introduced than the teachings of agreement would seem to warrant, all patriotic men looked for authorization.

itself to a violent change, more anademy introduced than the teachings of axpertence would seem to warrant, all patrioffe men looked for national repose, as a set-off. The one great theory of our government, which was anpposed to be settled, was that each State should manage its own intermal affairs, but so far from the abolition of slavery having composed our sectional differences, it has only intensified them—the negro being still the subject of strife. The North claimed that humanity required its interposition to protect the recently emancipated slaves from aggression on the part of thepeople of the South, and new and strange tribunals were lastituted among its to manage this race, claiming and whites and blacks, as to all matters to which a headman was a party, and resting their decimal matters are the sections. Report of the Secretary of the Treasury.

The the following is a sum.

Receipts have exceeded the estimates $89, 805,905 Oct. The expenditures have fallen short of the estimates $200,559,255 DO.

He recommends inriter diminution in internal taxes. He says the present generation, with proper economy, can pay the delt.

He regrets, notwithstanding the large reduction of the National debt and the satisfactory tory condition in other respects of the National Treasury, that little progress has been made since his last report toward specie payments. He explains at length his action concerning the disposal of surplus gold.

He recommends that the national banks be compelled to redeem at a single Atlantic city; the curtailment of the currency; a careful revision of the tariff to make it harmonize with ont internal taxes; the issue for 20 years or less of bonds at 5 per cent, pashle in Englement of the other with the presence of the nations. The resonal shall to ground of obsorb the 6 per cent, bonds now held in Europe, and to meet the demand there for netual and permanent investments; and the rebuiltation of the Southern States.

Noticing the card of J. M. Johnsou and J.
R. Berrick, copied in your paper yesterday from the Atlanta New Era, of a late date, I was surprised io see how little generons Kentneky had given for the re-interment of her dead heroes. A little over seven hundred dollars from the citizens of the whole State.
What a sinr upon the living! What a neglect of the dead! I know there are many cells upon our citizens, from the South, which have been generously responded to, but this is the first and last call of our dead fathers.

is the first and last call of our dead fathers, brothers, husbands and sweethearts—a call for a decent hurial, a common mounment to show what they died for—the call of a living principle for the hurial of its dead.

Do we care the less for that principle and its aplendor? Was it success that made right, and defeat that made it wrong? These men have no central government to reluter them. No State to build a monument to thom. In your heart and mine they will ever live, but it is our daily and should be our pleasure to give them both barial and monument, that the world may not say we neglected the dead who fought for as.

Brevet Lieut, Col. W. F. Drum, A. A. A. G. Wilitary Division of Kentucky, Louisville, Ky.: COLONEL-I have the honor to report for the A party numbering from the neighboring towns of Perryville, Springfield, Haysville and Maxville, (with some of the young men of this town) dismounted near the edge of the town, and in small squads quietly took up position near the jail until the entire party were at and around the jail. About forty or fifty men were stationed on the corners of the streets, a haif square above the court house, where my men are quartered, acting as pickets, who detained any and sil citizens that might pass, until their designs were accomplished. In less than three minutes after the attack was made, the detachment was in line in the court house yard. I was well satisfied that I would not be called ou by the citil anthoritier, but took enited ou by the civil anthorities, but took this precaution in case that I should be. The town marshal came to the court house, where the detachment was standing under arms, and while the attack was being made, but idd not call on me for assistance or say a word shout jall. He was immediately selzed, compelled to deliver up the keys, and held in custody. In the meautime the prisoners, eight in number, were fully swakened by the hammering at the jail door, and tuily understood the danger that menaced them. They shricked and yelled for help, and armed themselves with billets of wood and stones, determined the state of t
